Executive Biography

Kay Wulf is an award-winning, multidisciplinary interior designer who demonstrates a keen talent for design excellence and comprehensive client satisfaction. An expert in her field, Kay brings 30 years of expertise in interior environments. Her portfolio contains an impressive range of work on award-winning local, national and international projects, from corporate headquarters and commercial office spaces for Fortune 100 corporations to building lobbies and amenity fueled public spaces.

Kay's designs led to publication in Commercial Interiors Volume 8, Interior Design Magazine, Contract Magazine, i4 Design Magazine, Environmental Design and Construction Magazine, Bisnow and the Illinois Real Estate Journal.

Wulf earned a Bachelor's of Science in interior design and an Associate of Applied Science in architectural technology from Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. She presently serves on the advisory board for the university's interior design program. Kay is NCIDQ Certified and a Registered Interior Designer in the State of Illinois.

As an industry thought leader, Wulf has spoken at numerous conferences and has been featured in national industry publications. She is past-president of both the International Interior Design Association and Chicago Women in Architecture. Among the organizations she volunteers with is the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.
